CORBON – a law enforcement, military and civilian self-defense ammunition manufacturer that ships all over the world – established a presence in Sturgis in April of 1995. Immediately prior to making the move from Detroit, the company received its largest law enforcement order at the time – half a million rounds.

“We moved to Sturgis, hired and trained 30 employees, and got the order out the door ahead of schedule,” said Peter Pi Sr., president and CEO of CORBON. “I attribute that success to the great workforce we have here in the Black Hills.”

But the company didn’t stop there. CORBON is currently in the process of expanding. “We are adding 6,000 square feet to our building, have purchased new equipment and hired 10 new employees,” Pi said. “Apart from South Dakota’s great work ethic, being centrally located and the state’s economic climate are great assets for firearms companies,” Pi concluded.
